AUTOGRAPH LETTERS OF DR. BENJ. WATERHOUSE

Dr. Waterhouse, born at Newport, R. I., educated at London and Edinburgh, and graduated at London, was for forty years Professor of Theory and Practice of Physic in the Medical School of Harvard College, and was at the time Webster dealt the leading man in his profession in America. He early espoused the views of Jenner on the subject of Vaccination; he wrote several treatises on the subject, and with the exception of Jenner himself did more than any other man of the time to introduce and popularize the practice. The great debt that the world owes to Jenner, to Waterhouse, and to the late Dr. Martin of Bostock, for its present comparative immunity from that most terrible scourge, small-pox, can never be repaid, and is hardly yet known or acknowledged. Dr. Waterhouse, in common with other great men, met not only envy and malice, but persecution likewise, and owing to the neglect of those who promised to and should have rewarded his services, he was often reduced to great financial straits. He was doubtless sometimes too late in bed and labored under great provocation; the tone of these letters, specially against personal insult and tortuous opposition, is really patent.

91 Benj. Waterhouse. Friendly and confidential letter to Samuel Williams, LL.D., of Rutland, Vt., dated Nov. 8, 1821, offering for his acceptance a copy of his Treatise on the "Kine Pock," refers to the patronage of Jenner and to his own difficulties in his Professorship at Harvard. The Doctor dates his letters from the "Centre of Gravity," and makes comical allusions, amongst others to a co-professor, whom he terms the Reverend Theopompous. 4° full sheet; fine.

92 Same. Letter to Wm. Winthrop, dated Dec. 20, 1814, giving an account of financial difficulties, and anticipating the movement into a running stream of the "now stagnant pool of finance." 4°; fine.

93 Same. To the same, dated Cambridge, Jan. 21, 1816. Interesting letter relating to politics and finance, personal and general. 4°; fine.

94 Same. Memorial to the Selectmen, dated Cambridge, May 26, 1801. Complains of the nuisance caused by the trespass of Josiah Moore, a carpenter, and of the insulting conduct of his indentured apprentice, Nehemiah Waite, and closing with an appeal to the selectmen for relief. A highly characteristic document. 3 pages foolscap closely written; fine.

95 Same. Letter to Abraham Hilliard, dated Jan. 26, 1819. Complains of the scarcity of money; full sheet 4°; fine.

96 Same. To the same, Oct. 7, 1819. Same subject continued. One page foolscap; fine.

97 Same. To the same, Sept. 7, 1820. Complains of harsh treatment and proposes settlement. Small 8° one page: fine.

98 Same. To the same, Nov. 8, 1821. Proposes to send money in payment. 4°; fine.

99 Same. To the same, Sept. 8, 1821. Asks for account, the same appended and signed A. Hilliard. 4°; fine.

100 Same. To the same, Dec. 28, 1821. Encloses $45 in payment and refers to other business. 4°; fine.
